

NAFTA's Next Phase Toward North American Union?

by Christian Gomez

Late in the night on September 30, 2018, Canada agreed to join the new, renegotiated NAFTA — officially named the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement, or USMCA — meeting the self-imposed midnight deadline in order to complete an agreement in time for Mexican President Enrique Peña Nieto to sign before his departure from office on December 1, 2018.

In a joint statement, United States Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer and Canadian Foreign Affairs Minister Chrystia Freeland said:

Today, Canada and the United States reached an agreement, alongside Mexico, on a new, modernized trade agreement for the 21st Century: the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA). USMCA will give our workers, farmers, ranchers and businesses a high-standard trade agreement that will result in freer markets, fairer trade and robust economic growth in our region. It will strengthen the middle class, and create good, well-paying jobs and new opportunities for the nearly half billion people who call North America home.

We look forward to further deepening our close economic ties when this new agreement enters into force.

We would like to thank Mexican Economy Secretary Ildefonso Guajardo for his close collaboration over the past 13 months.

Within hours of their announcement, the full text of the agreement was posted on the USTR website for the public to read.

The proposed USMCA has been widely portrayed as a replacement for NAFTA, which supposedly will no longer exist. Yet an honest look at the new agreement shows that what will no longer exist is the highly unpopular NAFTA name. In fact, not only does the USMCA retain sovereignty-diminishing provisions found in the NAFTA agreement, but it actually strengthens and expands them.

The USMCA has a total of 34 chapters, 12 more than the original 1994 NAFTA, which only had 22 chapters. Unlike the 1994 NAFTA, the USMCA includes chapters on labor, the environment, anticorruption, regulatory policy, competitiveness, and Mexico's exclusive ownership of its gasoline and natural gas resources, among others.

The following is a list of the USMCA's 34 chapters, along with their annexes:

1. Initial Provisions and General Definitions
2. National Treatment and Market

- Access for Goods
 - US Tariff Schedule
 - US TRQ Appendix, MX Tariff Schedule
 - CA Tariff Schedule
 - CA TRQ Appendix
- 3. Agriculture
 - Agriculture Chapter
 - Mexico-US Bilateral Annex
 - Canada-US Bilateral Annex
 - Alcohol Annex
 - Proprietary Food Formulas Annex
- 4. Rules of Origin, with Product Specific Rules
- 5. Origin Procedures
- 6. Textiles and Apparel
- 7. Customs and Trade Facilitation
- 8. Recognition of the Mexican State's Direct, Inalienable, and Imprescriptible Ownership of Hydrocarbons
- 9. Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures
- 10. Trade Remedies
- 11. Technical Barriers to Trade
- 12. Sectoral Annexes
- 13. Government Procurement
- 14. Investment
- 15. Cross-Border Trade in Services
- 16. Temporary Entry
- 17. Financial Services
- 18. Telecommunications
- 19. Digital Trade
- 20. Intellectual Property
- 21. Competition Policy
- 22. State-Owned Enterprises
- 23. Labor
- 24. Environment
- 25. Small and Medium-Sized Enterprises
- 26. Competitiveness
- 27. Anticorruption
- 28. Good Regulatory Practices
- 29. Publication and Administration
- 30. Administrative and Institutional Provisions
- 31. Dispute Settlement

U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer (center), a longtime member of the globalist Council on Foreign Relations, gestures while speaking after President Donald Trump announced a revamped North American “free trade” deal, known as the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement, or USMCA, in the Rose Garden of the White House in Washington, October 1.

- 32. Exceptions and General Provisions
- 33. Macroeconomic Policies and Exchange Rate Matters
- 34. Final Provisions

In total, the USMCA is a whopping 1,809 pages —1,572 pages for the treaty itself, 214 pages for additional annexes, and 23 pages for side letters. In comparison, NAFTA was over 1,700 pages long — 741 pages for the treaty itself, 348 pages for annexes, and 619 pages for additional footnotes and explanations.

Once in force, the agreement will have a 16-year life, after which it will automatically be terminated unless the countries agree to renew the agreement for another 16 years. According to Article 34.7 of Chapter 34, entitled “Final Provisions,” the “Agreement shall terminate 16 years after the date of its entry into force, unless each Party confirms it wishes to continue the Agreement for a new 16-year term.” In other words, if the USMCA goes into effect in 2019, the agreement would not terminate until the year 2035 unless it is renewed for another 16 years, at which point it would not expire until 2051.

However, the United States, Mexico, and Canada will have an opportunity to review the agreement every six years, at which time they can decide whether to renew it or not, or propose changes. If during the review the head of state of one of the countries expresses a desire to remain in the agreement, the agreement will be given an automatic renewal. Countries also have the opportunity to withdraw from the agreement with a six-month written notice. Even if one country withdraws, the agreement remains in effect for the other countries.

According to Article 34.6, “A Party may withdraw from this Agreement by providing written notice of withdrawal to the other Parties. A withdrawal shall take effect six months after a Party provides written notice to the other Parties. If a Party withdraws, the Agreement shall remain in force for the remaining Parties.”

Submission to International Authority

Consistent with other globalist schemes, the USMCA follows the “rules-based system” of compliance with international authorities such as the World Trade Organization, International Labor Organization, and a plethora of United Nations conventions including the Law of the Sea Treaty, and the furtherance of “sustainable development,” which is mentioned no fewer than six times in the environment chapter.

One example of the USMCA’s complete subordination to international authority can be found in Article 24.18 of the new environment chapter, regarding fisheries, which states in part:

Each Party shall base its fisheries management system on the best scientific evidence available and on internationally recognized best practices for fisheries management and conservation as reflected in the relevant provisions of international instruments aimed at ensuring the sustainable use and conservation of marine species.

The footnote below for that section defines what exactly those “international instruments” are, stating:

These instruments include, among others, and as they may apply, United Nations Convention on Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), the United Nations Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, done at New York, December 4, 1995 (UN Fish Stocks Agreement), the FAO Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries, the 1993 FAO Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Conservation and Management Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas (Compliance Agreement), done at Rome, November 24, 1993, the 2001

In a bold step toward a potential North American Union, the USMCA establishes a new governing international bureaucracy. Chapter 30 of the agreement establishes the creation of a Free Trade Commission as a regional governing bureaucracy overseeing various lower regional committees.

FAO International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter, and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported, and Unregulated (IUU Fishing), and the 2009 Agreement on Port State Measures to Prevent, Deter, and Eliminate IUU Fishing.

Toward a North American Union

In a bold step toward a potential North American Union, the USMCA establishes a new governing international bureaucracy. Chapter 30 of the agreement establishes the creation of a Free Trade Commission as a regional governing bureaucracy overseeing various lower regional committees. Article 30, Section 1, of the agreement states, “The Parties hereby establish a Free Trade Commission, composed of government representatives of each Party at the level of Ministers or their designees.” Article 30, Section 2, outlines the various functions and powers of the Free Trade Commission as follows:

The Commission shall:

- (a) consider matters relating to the implementation or operation of this Agreement;
- (b) consider proposals to amend or modify this Agreement;
- (c) supervise the work of committees, working groups, and other subsidiary bodies established under this Agreement;

Toward a North American Union: (From left) Canadian Foreign Minister Chrystia Freeland, Mexican Economy Minister Ildefonso Guajardo and U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer attend a press conference in Mexico City on March 5, 2018, for talks on the North American Free Trade Agreement. By September 30, 2018, all three countries had agreed on the USMCA agreement, which would replace NAFTA. The new agreement includes a North American Competitiveness Committee with “a view to promoting further economic integration” of the U.S., Mexico, and Canada.

Submission to International Authority: Consistent with other globalist schemes, the USMCA follows the “rules-based system” of compliance to international authorities such as the World Trade Organization, International Labor Organization, and a plethora of United Nations conventions including the Law of the Sea treaty and the furtherance of “sustainable development.”

- (d) consider ways to further enhance trade and investment between the Parties;
- (e) adopt and update the Rules of Procedure and Code of Conduct; and
- (f) review the roster established under Article 31.8 (Roster and Qualifications of Panelists) every three years and, when appropriate, constitute a new roster.

The Free Trade Commission requires the United States, Mexico, and Canada to “establish and oversee a Secretariat comprising national Sections.” All three countries will be responsible for establishing and maintaining a “permanent office of its Section and be responsible for its operation and costs.” The role of the secretariat will be to assist and promote the work of the commission, provide administrative assistance to any dispute-settlement panels, and cover the costs and expenses for panelists, assistants, and experts involved in a dispute-settlement proceeding.

Beneath the Free Trade Commission, the USMCA authorizes all three countries to establish the following subordinate committees:

- Committee on Agricultural Trade
- Committee on Rules of Origin and Origin Procedures
- Committee on Textile and Apparel Trade Matters
- Customs and Trade Facilitation Committee
- Committee on Technical Barriers to Trade
- Committee on Government Procurement
- Committee on Transportation Services
- Committee on Financial Services
- Committee on Telecommunications
- Committee on Intellectual Property Rights
- Committee on State-Owned Enterprises and Designated Monopolies
- Environment Committee
- Committee on SME (Small and Medium-Sized Enterprises) Issues
- North American Competitiveness Committee,
- Committee on Good Regulatory Practices
- Advisory Committee on Private Commercial Disputes

The specific functions for each committee are outlined in their corresponding chapters. Nevertheless, all of these committees are to be comprised of representatives from the governments of all three countries. The committees are responsible for overseeing and helping to implement the agreement in their particular area. They will also be tasked with addressing any issues that arise under their area.

Committees will meet regularly or on an annual basis, and they are supposed to help encourage or foster greater cooperation and trade among all three countries in their given areas. Committees can also propose changes or revisions to the chapter in the agreement that corresponds to their area. All of the committees’ work, discussions, findings, and recommendations are to be submitted to the Free Trade Commission for consideration.

And much like the TPP Commission, the Free Trade Commission can make changes to the USMCA without the consent of Congress. In fact, the agreement completely undermines Congress’s constitutional Article I, Section 8 power to regulate trade with foreign nations, such as Mexico and Canada, and to impose tariffs on them should the need arise, as in the case of national security.

The Free Trade Commission would also have the power to consider or adopt any changes to a country’s scheduled tariff commitments by accelerating the elimination of tariffs or by making “adjustments to the Tariff Preferential Levels established in Chapter 6 (Textile and Apparel Goods).”

Among the most revealing and unsurprising aspects of these transnational committees, which underscores the value of the USMCA to the Deep State, is the stated objective of the North American Competitiveness Committee. In the USMCA’s Chapter 26 on competitiveness, all three countries agree to establish a Committee on Competitiveness, or a North American Competitiveness Committee, with “a view to promoting further economic integration among the Parties and enhancing the competitiveness of North American exports.” [Emphasis added.] In other words, the committee’s objective is not about making the United States, Mexico, and Canada more competitive with each other, but making the three of them as a bloc more competitive with the rest of the world — hence its function to promote “further economic integration” between the three countries.

USMCA will not help the United States, Mexico, or Canada be more competitive individually or boost any one of these three countries’ economies. The Deep State does not wish for the United States alone to be competitive with the rest of the world, or maintain global economic dominance; instead it must surrender its sovereignty — along with that of its neighbors — to a new supranational body that will supposedly protect “North American” jobs, industry, and economy.

Rather than putting “America first,” as President Trump has repeatedly promised, or “Making America Great Again,” his new NAFTA, the USMCA, demotes the United States to second tier in pursuit of making North America great. The USMCA makes North America great at the expense of the United States and its national sovereignty.

Under this scheme, the United States will be required to surrender its sovereignty in order to be a member of the winning team. Americans have been lied to and duped by their government into believing that their elected leaders are working in their interest, only to have them subordinate America’s interests to those of North America. It’s only a matter of time before the same charade is pulled on North America in order to integrate it with the world’s other regional trade blocs (e.g., the European Union, African Union, Union of South America, Eurasian Economic Union, RCEP, TPP, TTIP) into one world economic union and commission, under the auspices of the United Nations and the World Trade Organization.

The result of “promoting further economic integration” among the United States, Mexico, and Canada, necessitating the creation of an all-powerful, unelected Free Trade Commission, will be nothing less than a North American Union. That alone should motivate patriotic Americans to vehemently reject the new United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement.

Far from making America great again,

the USMCA is a bag of goodies for globalists and a death certificate for American national sovereignty.

THE TAKEAWAY

THERE'S A GROWING AWARENESS OF A DEEP STATE FREE TRADE AGENDA FOR GLOBAL GOVERNMENT

The globalist Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) and its counterparts in Europe established the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC) in 1951, then worked closely together over the next six decades to transform the ECSC into the present-day regional government known as the European Union (EU) via a series of "free trade" agreements.

THE DEEP STATE CFR HAS BEEN WORKING FOR THE LAST THREE DECADES TO ESTABLISH A NORTH AMERICAN UNION (NAU)

American globalists have worked with their counterparts in Mexico and Canada for over 30 years to create an NAU (modeled after the EU) via the 1994 North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and the proposed 2018 United States-Mexico-Canada (USMCA) agreement.

THE ULTIMATE GOAL OF THE GLOBALIST SCHEMERS IS TO CREATE A WHOLE SERIES OF REGIONAL GOVERNMENTS, SUCH AS THE EU AND NAU, AS STEPPING STONES TOWARD A UN WORLD GOVERNMENT.

The CFR uses its massive influence in government, media, academia, finance, and foundations to undermine the Constitution by destroying our national sovereignty in order to establish a world government.

THE SOLUTION: CONSTITUTIONAL ENFORCEMENT, NOT REGIONAL & WORLD GOVERNMENT

PUBLIC SERVANTS: Obey your oath to the Constitution. Oppose "free trade" agreements, such as the USMCA, which compromise our national sovereignty by ceding the exclusive constitutional power of Congress to regulate trade with foreign nations to regional and world governments.

PATRIOTS: Learn the Constitution and hold your elected representatives accountable to it. The John Birch Society has the programs to help you make a difference by educating voters and public servants. Visit JBS.org/nafta for more information and tools you can use to stop the USMCA threat to our national sovereignty and Constitution.
